Moving Forward from Strength to Greater Strength

MORRIS BACKER
Fellow, ASHRAE
President, ASHRAE

As President Morabito’s year nears its end, we look back at an impressive record of professional development. We must now look inwardly and put our own house in order.

This year, I will encourage the successful completion of many ongoing programs whose final resolution is of paramount importance to society as a whole. The decisions we reach on these critical issues will play a significant role in determining how well we can meet tomorrow’s challenges.

The completion of our pending programs (and the identification and work on new programs) in energy conservation, public affairs, research, standards, international activities, education, and communications, will require purposeful, diligent effort from each Society member. To maintain our state of excellence, our influence, and our vitality, we must be willing to make internal adjustments, just as we have adapted to meet the world’s changing technological requirements.

The present alignment of our regions is an area particularly ripe for change. It is paradoxically a problem stemming from the key to our present success: Our growth. Growth has enabled us to deal with the larger, more complex dilemmas of society, yet the rise in membership has inhibited meaningful dialogue among members. Some of our regions cover huge geographical areas, making the job of our regional chairmen difficult, further affecting interaction between members. The Society has been studying and working on this new opportunity for approximately one year. If the membership is in agreement, a plan of action will be implemented next year.

Aiming at more effective internal communications, our longrange planning committee has recommended the establishment of a special Presidential Advisory Council. The Council, consisting of six Directors-At-Large, would guide standing committees in the implementation of presidential goals.

Internal operations will be further strengthened with implementation of several changes to the Presidential Award of Excellence. A new energy conservation criterion will be added, and a new specially designed felt patch, this year, will replace the current ribbon streamers used to commemorate award winners. For greater incentive, competition, and recognition, award winners next year will be divided into three classifications. As a final change, credit toward Award of Excellence calculations will now be given to chapters sponsoring student members, when students upgrade their membership to Affiliate or Associate Member status.

With these goals in mind, ASHRAE will do much to maintain its excellence of performance. But the largest opportunity for the Society lies within each chapter. I am making a special request this year that each Chapter, Committee, and Task Group look within, examine its potential, and set a specific goal for attainment.

I am confident that with continued dedication and enthusiasm, our membership will fulfill ongoing and future goals. We have great strength in our members, our organization, and our pursuits. Let us build on this sturdy foundation and move forward, FROM STRENGTH TO GREATER STRENGTH.
